THE ARTS COMMISSION

TO THE HONORABLE
THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF DETROIT

Gentlemen:

We present to you the report of the Arts Commission for the year 1959. Despite limitations the year has been a good one. We feel it only fair however to point out to you that we are operating on a budget ten percent lower than two years ago, with a reduced number of employees and limited operating funds. On the other hand, the private support we have been able to secure for our museum has never been more generous. In the decade 1950-1959 we acquired by gift 4,237 works of art with a value of $4,721,079. Above and beyond this the total of gifts for all purposes during this decade, for works of art, for activities, for research projects, for improvements made in our building, totalled approximately $8,500,000, of which approximately $3,000,000 was given to the Founders Society in 1959.

In the year 1959, for example, we were given $15,000 to modernize and re-equip the kitchen. We were given $17,000 to equip the building with an electronic guided tour system, and we are promised money by the Kresge Foundation to improve the open court in the European wing.

By appealing to our private support we were thus able to make some desperately needed improvements in our building. Nevertheless, the growth of the collection, the growth of activities, the growth of demands upon the staff have outrun our capacity and, operating as they are with reduced staff and reduced operating funds, the whole organization is put under a very severe strain.

The attendance figures, the gifts, the private support, the activity of the friends of the museum, show that the community needs and appreciates the services that our institution is intended to provide. We are faced however, with very great problems and grave needs, which are detailed in the report which follows.

A. MEMBERSHIP OF THE ARTS COMMISSION

Mayor Miriani reappointed Douglas F. Roby as an Arts Commissioner for a four-year term ending February 28, 1963. The other Commissioners are: Robert H. Tannahill (for the term ending February 28, 1960), Mrs. Edsel B. Ford (for the term ending February 28, 1961), James S. Whitcomb (for the term ending February 28, 1961), K. T. Keller, Selden B. Daume and Leslie H. Green for the terms ending February 28, 1962.

B. GROWTH OF THE COLLECTION

No tax funds were provided this year for purchases of works of art, the entire appropriation going toward operation, maintenance and care of the building and grounds. The private supporters of the museum gave us 454 works of art valued at $692,395, an increase of $112,806 over the previous year.

C. PROGRESS OF BUILDING RENOVATION

We have closed out our last contracts for air conditioning and renovation of the Rivera Court in 1959. Only a small part of the building renovation progress initiated in 1950 remains. During the year 1959 we raised $14,000 by private subscription to remodel and reinstall the kitchen, and over $17,000 to install our system of electronic guided tours in the building.

D. NEEDS OF THE MUSEUM

Enlargement of our building. The Capital Improvement Program begun in 1950 and terminated in 1958 provided for better organized storage space, educational department space, and air conditioning the building. It did little if anything for the problem of housing and exhibiting our collection of works of art. Since 1950, when we raised the question of enlarging this building, we have added more than 4,000 works of art. We need space for American, European and Contemporary art, for staff, for storage, and for work space for restorers, photographers, cabinet makers, etc. With each year the situation grows more difficult.

The need for better parking facilities has become extremely urgent. For most of the past decade we have been urging a solution for the desperate lack of parking facilities to serve our building. Are we any nearer a solution after ten years?

The growth of the collection, the growth of activities, the growth of demands upon our staff, have outrun our capacity. We need additional guards to guarantee the safety of the collection and to keep our galleries open all the time. We need still more guards to provide what the Commission believes to be the ideal service to the public of Detroit, that is, to be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

We are criticized each year by the Auditor General for failure to keep an active inventory of our property in our vast collections. We simply do not have the clerical staff to keep this inventory and we do not have the stenographic staff to keep up with the work load. We need to strengthen the library staff and funds to bring this branch of our operation up to its work load, and we also need a plan for the growth of our professional staff. Salaries are at present on a level which makes it impossible for us to compete with those paid by colleges and universities, who are taking the cream of the trained art historians today.

F. EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES

In recent years our educational activities have developed in many new directions to serve the complex interests of our expanding audience. Workshops for children and adults, seminars and lecture series, films produced by the staff, Adult Education courses, have all been successful in reaching various interested groups. However, one of the basic services of the Department, and one of the most requested, is still the informative general tour of the collection. This seems like a simple enough service to provide and yet it is really a most difficult one. People come to the Museum at all hours, individuals have different interests and wish to see different sections of the Museum. How to arrange frequent enough general tours, broad enough in scope to take care of individual interests, has remained our most perplexing problem.

The introduction of LecTour, a system of guided tours through small transistor radios, now enables us to provide expert guidance at all hours. To date twelve of the major galleries have been wired for LecTour providing the visitor with substantial information about our most important works of art as he looks at them. The knowledge, and in some cases the voices too, of the Director, the curators and the members of the Education Department are available some nine hours a day and can be tapped according to the interests and time schedules of the individual gallery visitor. In the case of temporary exhibitions, LecTour makes it possible to bring special personalities to the attention of the public; during the exhibition Architect in Detroit, for example, Minoru Yamasaki discussed his own work and through LecTour was able to explain the development of his ideas.

The installation of this valuable service was made possible through funds provided by the Activities Committee, the Kahn Fund and the Founders Society Publications Fund.

Community Services. During the Spring we participated in an experiment in co-operative planning, Detroit Adventure, arranged jointly by the Detroit Public Library, Wayne State University and the Detroit Institute of Arts. Adventure programs were designed to stress the great cultural and educational resources of Detroit and to combine these resources in new and productive ways. The first programs offered were a series of discussion groups or Conversations in the Arts. Institute staff members conducted six discussion groups, Looking at Modern Painting, and each group met for six weeks. Another phase of Detroit Adventure presented the services of the city's cultural resources in displays in downtown store windows; the Department provided materials for eight windows devoted to the services of the Institute. The final section of Detroit Adventure, 1959 was planned in conjunction with the Second McGregor Conference. The first Detroit Adventure met with great success and plans were made during the Fall for a similar program to be held in the Spring of 1960.

Symposium. The Art of the Ancient Maya: A Symposium planned to clarify the achievement of the Maya and to re-evaluate this important Middle-American civilization in light of the latest archaeological discoveries was held on February 13 through 15. The meetings were attended by capacity audiences of 400 and brought together interested people from fourteen states, many of them representing museums and universities. During the three day sessions six experts discussed their special areas of interest. Participants included Dr. Carlos Samayo Chincilla, Director of the Institute of Archaeology in Guatemala City, and Antonio Tejeda, Director of the National Museum of Archaeology, who attended the meetings through the cooperation of the State Department. Papers by American specialists were: The Plastic Arts of the Highland Maya by Dr. Stephan F. Borhegyi, Director of the Milwaukee Public Museum; War and Sacrifice as Seen in Mayan Art by Dr. Robert Rands, the University of Mississippi; Space and Its Design in Maya Architecture by Dr. George A. Kubler, Yale University; How Do We Know We Are Dealing With Maya Culture by Miss Tatiana Proskouriakoff, The Carnegie Institute.

University Groups. During the past ten years our work with local and state universities has more than doubled. In addition to the increasing number of classes from the history, music, language and art departments which regularly visit the Institute, we have worked with various faculties and departments on projects relating to the arts, including groups from Wayne State University, University of Detroit, Marygrove College, Mercy College, Dun Scotus College, Detroit Institute of Technology, University of Michigan, and Michigan State University.

Lectures. The Detroit Institute of Arts Lecture Series Committee presented the following guest lecturers on their sixth subscription series: Paul Rudolph, Head, Department of Architecture, Yale University—The Determinants of Architectural Form; Miss Emily Genauer, Art Critic, The New York Herald Tribune—American Art Today; Dr. Wolfgang Stechow, Department of Art, Oberlin College—Dutch Landscape Painting of the 17th Century; Russell Lynes, noted author and Managing Editor, Harper's Magazine—The Persistence of American Taste; Gustave von Groschwitz, Senior Curator and Curator of Prints, The Cincinnati Art Museum—Contemporary Printmakers.

The Detroit Chapter of the Archaeological Institute of America, in cooperation with the Department, offered lectures by Burhan Tezcan, Assistant Curator, Archaeological Museum, Turkey—The Excavations at Gordion in Asia Minor; Dr. Alexander Cambitogla, Assistant Professor of Clasical Archaeology, Bryn Mawr College—The Brygos Painter; Dr. Paul McKendrick, Professor of Classics, University of Wisconsin—A Masterpiece of Roman Architecture: The Sanctuary of Fortune at Praeneste; Professor George E. Mylonas, President of the A.I.A. and Chairman, Department of Art and Archaeology, Washington University, Eleusis: Its Sanctuary and Cemetery; Dr. Herbert Kuhn, University of Mainz and Visiting Professor in Pre-History, Wayne State University, New Finds in European Prehistoric Art.

Other guest lecturers presented during the year included: Victor D'Amico, Director of Education, Museum of Modern Art—The Renaissance in Art Education (in cooperation with the Art Education Department, Wayne State University); Joseph H. Hirshhorn, who discussed his experiences in collecting at the time of the Hirshhorn Exhibition; Sir George Trevelyan, Warden, Attingham Park Adult College, Shropshire, England—Great English Country Houses (in cooperation with the Activities Committee); Fred Mitchell, Painting Department, Cranbrook Academy of Art and Seymour Riklin, Wayne State University discussed Abstract Expressionism at the time of the Michigan Artist Exhibition.

Study Courses. A wide variety of subjects were covered in the fourteen study courses conducted by the Department during the year. During the Winter-Spring months Virginia Harriman presented a series of talks on The Development of Modern Paintings; Nicholas Snow discussed The Art of the Printmaker; Ralph Glowacki offered a series on Modern Sculpture relating to the Hirshhorn exhibition; Curtis Coley conducted a survey of The Art of the Orient; and Patricia Slattery gave a series Preview for Italy: A Guide to the Art Treasures of Italy.

Summer courses included Directions in 20th Century Sculpture by Mr. Glowacki; American Art: 20th Century by Mr. Snow; The Art of the Renaissance in Northern Europe by Mr. Coley and The Decorative Arts by Jerome Pryor.

For a number of years, staff members have given courses in various phases of the History of Art for the Society of Arts and Crafts, for the University of Michigan Extension Service, and for Wayne State University, using the original material provided by the permanent collections and loan exhibitions of the Institute. Two years ago, art courses from the two universities were placed under a new Division of Adult Education of the combined institutions. An evening series begun in 1951 by Elizabeth H. Payne, and later placed under the Division of Adult Education, was terminated at the conclusion of her course on The Development of Modern Painting given during the Winter-Spring session.

A revised and expanded project was developed during the Fall, when members of the Education Department took over the conducting of these courses at the Institute for the Division of Adult Education, adding day-time to the evening courses. Two sections on Masterpieces of Painting in the Detroit Institute of Arts were conducted by Miss Harriman and Mr. Glowacki, American Art by Mr. Snow and The Arts of Northern Europe by Mr. Coley.

Film as an Art. In order to preserve the continuity of our popular Film as an Art series during a difficult budgetary period, it proved necessary during the early part of the year to make use of 16 mm films. Supplementary resources provided by the Kahn Fund and General Membership Fund of the Founders Society, however, made it possible during the second half of this year to return to the use of 35 mm film. Though considerably more expensive than 16 mm material, 35 mm film provides better sound, visual imagery and professional projection. It is gratifying to be able to return to the excellent standards which have distinguished the Film as an Art program since its inception fifteen years ago.

Our audiences have continued to show deep interest in our progress; which this year included such fine films as The Last Bridge, Gold of Naples, and the Dark River.

Detroit Institute of Arts Films. No new films have been added to the Museum's production this year, but a new version of the Institute's first film, Flemish Painting, 1440-1540 is to be made in the first weeks of 1960, under the direction of Mr. John Morse, New York writer and editor of art, and Mr. John Rogers, of the staff of WWJ-TV. The acquisition of an important triptych by the Master of the St. Ursula Legend and the restoration of the St. Jerome in His Study by Jan Van Eyck have necessitated the re-photographing of the original film.

The West German government has purchased twenty-five copies of The Expressionist Revolt for circulation outside the United States, in connection with an exhibition of modern German art and for regular distribution through the film-lending services of its consulates. As the result of Detroit's activity in film production Virginia Harriman was asked to write an article on Museum Film Production for the booklet Films in Museums, to be published by the American Association of Museums and circulated to its membership.

Television. Museum Visit, a series of thirteen programs on film, was presented from November 1 to January 24 over station WWJ-TV. Sponsored by the Founders Society, the programs were telecast on Sunday mornings at 11:30. John D. Morse, who conducted the Institute's radio program, The Human Side of Art, from 1935 to 1941, returned from New York to produce the series. The programs were based chiefly on films of the collections taken in 1955, which were edited and cut to twelve minutes each, allowing time for new, filmed interviews with various members of the staff. The commentary for each program was written and narrated by Mr. Morse, who also conducted the interviews.

Subjects were Whitby Hall, The Rivera Murals, Old Detroit, Colonial Painting and Silver, 18th Century France, Arms and Armor, The Art of Egypt, Art of the American Indians, Greek and Roman Sculpture and The Art of China. Two of the programs began and ended in the Second Biennial Exhibition of American Oil Painting and Sculpture, with the central portion devoted to a kinescope of interviews with leading American artists which Mr. Morse conducted in 1955 for the Whitney Museum of American Art and the Columbia Broadcasting System. One program started out to be a two-minute interview with the Institute's painting conservationist, Mr. William Suhr, but the discussion proved so interesting that it ended as a full fifteen-minute film, including a statement by Mr. Richardson on the Institute's newly acquired Resurrection by the Master of Osservanza.

Cooperative Program—The Detroit Public Schools. These important programs, planned each year by the Department and Mrs. Helen C. Gordon, Director of Art in the schools, are designed to fit the interests and needs of each age group.

Elementary Grades were conducted on special tours arranged at the request of their teacher and planned to correlate with classroom studies.

Junior High School groups met in the Lecture Hall on Wednesdays during the Spring semester for an illustrated program The Art of the Sculptor and later visited the galleries with members of the Staff. On Wednesdays during the Fall semester outstanding local artists presented demonstrations for the students; gallery visits followed.

High School Day was attended by groups from each of the city's secondary schools. The theme of this year's program was Contemporary Art featuring a panel consisting of Mr. Aaron Schrier, architect, Mr. Jack Bailey, painter, and Ralph Glowacki of the staff who discussed sculpture. The Auditorium program was followed by visits to the galleries and the special exhibition of architecture by Minoru Yamasaki. Demonstrations by leading Detroit artists were given in galleries throughout the Museum. Teachers in the High Schools schedule numerous special tours during the year in addition to this annual program.

Vacation Programs. The series of special events planned for young people during school vacations and Saturdays has become an important part of our program for young people. Our Saturday film series, Great Stories in Film, was designed to present excellent films of popular classics to children of school age. Such stories as The Three Musketeers, Alice in Wonderland and Treasure Island earned a most favorable response and we expect this Kahn Fund Project will become an increasingly popular offering.

During the summer vacation, programs included a fascinating group of dances and dance-stories presented by Harriet Berg, and the members of the Wayne State University Dance Workshop which delighted their young audience, as did a program of short films by Walt Disney including Nature's Half Acre and Beaver Valley. The Puppeteens of the Institute's Theatre Arts Department presented The Pink Siamese, and Punch's Players presented Greensleeves Magic.

Workshops. Museum Workshops for Young People offer opportunities for creative work and study and appreciation of the collections. Five-week sessions for each grade, one through twelve, are offered Fall, Spring and Summer.

Family Workshops meet on Sunday afternoons and give parents an opportunity to share creative work with their school age children. Patricia Slattery planned the workshops to include a variety of materials and projects to interpret ideas and objects studied in the Museum collection.

Amateur Night classes in which the adult beginner is introduced to the simple technique of oil painting, ceramics, weaving, enameling, watercolor, sculpture and sketching are held on Wednesday evenings. Such great interest has been shown in these classes that it was necessary again this year to schedule a ten-week session during the Summer. Instructors for the adult classes are: Richard Eshkanian, Nicholas Buhalis, John Pappas, John Jacobson, Edith Foster, Thomas Brun, William Chapman, Glen Kaufman, Patricia Quinlan and Helen Boose.

During the past few years, Whitby Hall, the "Period House" in our museum, has undergone a number of significant changes. Authentic wood panelling from old houses in the East, additional furniture, and most important, a new decorating scheme, have given it a new life. This is due mostly to Mrs. Polly Jessup, of New York, and Mr. Robert H. Tannahill. The South bedroom, illustrated below, is the earlier of the redecorated rooms. The pine panelling was secured from Vauxhall Gardens, New Jersey, and was made about 1700-1730. The North bedroom is shown above. Its blue painted panelling originally formed part of the Spring Garden Mansion, Newcastle, Delaware, and dates from the third quarter of the 18th century.

G. DEPARTMENT OF THEATRE ARTS

In planning the activities of the Department of Theatre Arts, an attempt is made to meet the needs and demands of the community with special workshops, lectures, exhibitions and performances. The program made possible by a yearly grant from The Detroit News is an extensive and diversified one with some new activities being offered each year. A few of the activities of the Department are discussed in the following report.

The hospital and institutional program whereby institutions for handicapped and underprivileged children are given special performances as a free service, has become an integral part of the program. Lectures and special programs for schools and service organizations in the metropolitan area occupy a position of special importance in the program of activities, as well as the exhibitions of the theatre arts, such as the exhibition Walt Disney: The Art of Animation which was presented last spring in co-operation with the American Federation of Arts. The Youth Theatre Workshop continues to grow and performances of Winnie the Pooh on May 23 and The Three Bears on December 19 were highlights of this program during the year.

Detroit Puppet Theatre. The Detroit Puppet Theatre continued to offer performances by outstanding puppeteers from the United States and Canada. The number of performances was increased in 1959 by the addition of an adult series of puppet productions to the already firmly established children's series.

The 1959 Program included:

- February 25 — Dorothy Hayward Marionettes, Oakland, California, The Three Wishes and Three Little Pigs
- March 14 — Herrick Marionettes, Kingston, New York, The Prince and the Mermaid
- April 18 — The Puppeteens, Detroit Institute of Arts, The Pink Siamese
- July 8 — The Puppeteens, Detroit Institute of Arts, The Pink Siamese
- July 22 — Harold Ramm, Detroit, Michigan, Punch and Judy
- October 10 — Proctor Puppets, Springfield, Illinois, Sleeping Beauty
- November 21 — Merten-Lawrence Puppets, Toronto, Ontario, Wiggle, Twinkie, Christmas on the Rooftop
- November 22 — Merten Puppet Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, Rush Cafe
- December 18 — George Latshaw Puppets, Cleveland, Ohio, Hand in Glove

Total attendance at the performance in the Detroit Puppet Theatre reached 14,165 during 1959.

Special Projects. For the second consecutive year, the Detroit Puppet Theatre presented a special program with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The 1959 production was the puppet mime The Toy Box based on the suite La Boite a Joujoux by Claude Debussy. George Latshaw, Cleveland, Ohio, puppeteer, designed and directed the production. The puppeteers for the presentation were members of the Detroit Puppet Theatre's Puppeteens. The puppet designs were inspired by toy designs of Gordon Craig, their sizes ranging from three to twelve feet in height. The production played to a capacity house of 3,000 in the Ford Auditorium with the orchestra under the direction of Valter Poole. The same program was repeated by the Puppeteens later with the Rochester (N.Y.) Civic Orchestra in Eastman Auditorium in Rochester, New York. The production was enthusiastically received by the audience of 3,500 and loudly acclaimed by concert series officials as the most outstanding program ever presented on the series.

Workshops. Despite a cut-back in funds available for this activity, the total attendance was the largest in the past five years. Some thirty-seven workshops were offered to 1,504 children and adults, offering practical training in such courses as Puppet Theatre Production, Marionette Construction and Manipulation, Interpretation, Acting, Design and Costuming. Instructors included Tony Urbano, San Francisco, California; George Latshaw, Cleveland, Ohio; Grace Bucciero, Annette Maltz, Esther Zeitlin, Eve Sheldon and Gene Scrimpsher.

Puppeteens. This group of teen-age Detroit students, organized to provide programs for the institutional program, has gained a national reputation for its outstanding performances in such productions as Billy, The Kid, The Toy Box, and The Pink Siamese. The first two productions were presented with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and the Rochester (N.Y.) Civic Orchestra. The Pink Siamese, a musical play for marionettes was premiered by the Puppeteens in Detroit. The production gained such praise from nationally recognized puppet theatre critics that they were invited to present the production to the national convention of Puppeteers of America (500) in August, 1959. The group appeared with the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra early in 1960 in Billy, The Kid.

During the year, the total attendance at some eighty-five events and activities (workshops, lectures, tours, performances) was 24,432.

H. RESEARCH LIBRARY

In the Detroit Institute of Arts Research Library during the past year, as much attention as could be spared has been given to the transfer of our enormous clipping file to microcards. This process involves the mounting and arranging of clippings and other ephemeral material on sheets of paper, after which it is microfilmed by the City Records Offices. The microfilm is then made into microtape positives which are clipped, sorted and mounted on 3 x 5 inch cards to be filed in a card catalogue. During the year, about 10,000 current and past clippings were submitted to this process. The chief advantages which result are the preservation of material which, in its ordinary form, is deteriorating rapidly, and a great saving of space, since it requires much less room to file 2,000 cards (about one card catalogue drawer) than 2,000 envelopes of clipped material (about one vertical file). Volunteers have helped us greatly. Miss Barbara Clark worked with us regularly all summer and we also have had much help from Mrs. Yvonne Ferris, Miss Marguerite Endress and Mrs. Norma Jickling.

Our collection of 2 x 2 slides continues to grow, largely due to the efforts of the museum staff, as we have no budget to cover slide purchases as yet. About half of the collection is now permanently catalogued, thanks to the efforts of two more sterling volunteers, Mrs. Robert Koch and Mrs. Lucy Hamilton.

Perhaps this is a good place to point out how much we rely on volunteer help and how happily we would welcome any new volunteers who would join us. There are innumerable small tasks which would greatly increase the efficiency of the Research Library if they were carried out. Unfortunately, the regular staff is so swamped by what must be done that what ought to be done must be neglected. Volunteers who will mount photos, paste clippings, file post cards and photos, label photos, put slides in their aluminum mounts, do odd bits of typing and many other such tasks are valued far above rubies.

As to ordinary accomplishments, the Research Library acquired many fine books during the past year - 224 by purchase and 838 by gifts. A number of these are beautiful editions, and included are the first volumes of two new encyclopedias: Enciclopedia dell'Arte Antica, a new Italian publication on classical and oriental antiquities, lavishly illustrated which will run to six or eight volumes, and the McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of World Art, again a superbly illustrated set of volumes, given us by Mr. James Whitcomb. The Enciclopedia dell'Arte Antica is being bought volume by volume from library funds, but would make an excellent memorial gift to the library. If any readers should wish to assist us with the purchase in this way, please communicate with the Librarian.

I. ATTENDANCE, BUILDING AND STAFF

(a) Attendance. Our attendance for 1959 was 591,009, the largest for any year in the 1950's.

(b) Building and Grounds. We completed air conditioning the auditorium. An air conditioning unit was installed in the photographer's studio. The bronze doors of the auditorium were refinished. The auditorium stage scenery set was recovered. The walls of galleries 10, 11 and 1 were covered with new cloth. The electronic guided tour system was installed in 14 galleries. Five galleries of contemporary art on the top floor were painted; the walls of the Founders Lounge were painted; galleries 36, 37, 38 where special exhibitions are held, were repainted several times; print galleries 41 and 42 were repainted.

Progress was made in removing the shrubbery along the John R side of the grounds. A new privet hedge was planted along John R, Kirby and Farnsworth Avenues. New kitchen equipment was installed and the kitchen remodeled. New work tables were installed in the educational department workshops and 55 new steel folding chairs were added. The Pre-Columbian gallery was remodeled and built-in wall cases installed. A new portable public address system was purchased.

(c) Staff Changes. Mr. Charles Meyer resigned as Junior Curator in the Education Department in October to accept a position as Assistant Professor of Art History at Michigan State University.

BOOK REVIEWS IN THE ART QUARTERLY

(e) Conferences and Travel

Staff members usually attend a number of the principal conventions and conferences concerning Art Museums during the year. They travel also to select material for purchase and for loan exhibitions, and to gain a clearer understanding of professional problems. During 1959, their activities worked out thus:

The Museum Director travelled to Winterthur during January, to attend the board meeting of the Winterthur Museum. In early June, he went to Richmond, Virginia, for the annual meeting of the Association of Museum Directors, moving on to Pittsburgh for the meeting of the American Association of Museums. He travelled to New York several times for trustees' meetings of the Archives of American Art. He flew to Belgium in August, to confer with Belgian officials in connection with the Exhibition of Flemish Art of the 15th Century to be held in Bruges, then Detroit in 1960. At a conference held on Research Opportunities in American Cultural History at Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri, Mr. Richardson gave a talk on the Archives of American Art.

Paul L. Grigaut attended the annual meeting of the American Association of Museums in early June in Pittsburgh; while there he served as a member of a panel on Decorative Arts. He made numerous trips to New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other cities in connection with securing new acquisitions and loans. Other staff members who journeyed to the meeting at Pittsburgh include William A. Bostick and Francis W. Robinson.

Mr. Bostick travelled to Washington, D.C., in April to arrange for the installation of LecTour and attended the Midwest Conference held in late October in Toledo, where he was reappointed Editor of the MMC Quarterly. Also at Toledo were William A. McGonagle, Joseph Stanton, William E. Woolfenden, Patricia Slattery and Ralph Glowacki. Earlier, in April, Miss Slattery attended the meetings of the Committee on Art Education, the Museum of Modern Art, held at Madison, Wisconsin. During the summer, she travelled in Europe, as did Miss Harriman and Mr. Woolfenden.

Mr. Woolfenden served as chairman of the Technical Committee for the national crafts exhibit assembled by the U.S.I.A. and the St. Paul Art Gallery for circulation in Italy. He served also as one of the moderators at the Annual Conference of the American Craftsmen's Council held at Lake George in June, and in mid-November lectured on Modern Painting at the Fort Wayne, Indiana Art School and Gallery.

Selecting objects for purchase for the study collections of the Extension Services drew Mr. McGonagle to Washington, D.C. and New York in January. Franklin Page also travelled to New York in January to select objects for the loan exhibit Sculpture in Our Time; while there he also served with the Purchase Committee of the Friends of Modern Art. In August, Elizabeth H. Payne was in Boston and Salem, Massachusetts, to assemble material for the catalogue of the exhibition Eight Generations of the Pitts Family held here in October. In late October, Mr. Page journeyed to New York and Philadelphia to work with the juries for the Second Biennial of American Painting and Sculpture.

Mr. Robinson spent a month in Belgium in the early fall, along with the Director, working out details in connection with the very important exhibition of Flemish 15th Century Art to be held in 1960 in Bruges and in Detroit. In late December, 1959, he attended the annual meeting of the Archeological Institute of America.

(f) Expertises by the Staff. During the past year, the various curators on the staff examined around 900 objects which were brought in by their owners to be expertised. This consultation service, offered free to the public, included not only rendering an opinion on the age and authenticity of paintings, sculpture, decorative arts and textiles but the offering of advice on technical matters as well. This service has grown steadily during recent years, and telephone calls asking for advice ranged at times, in the case of a single curator, from fifteen to twenty-five a day.

K. LOANS TO OTHER INSTITUTIONS AND ORGANIZATIONS

Works of art were lent by the Detroit Institute of Arts during 1959 to other institutions ranging from neighbors in this area to museums abroad. Among the more distant exhibitions to which the institution lent works of art was that at the Kunstmuseum of Berne, Switzerland called Masterpieces of French Art of the 17th Century. Our Le Nain, A Peasant Family formed part of the exhibition held from January to March. Our Chagall Snow Covered Church was sent to the Kunsthalle, in Hamburg, Germany, in July for their "Chagall Exhibition." The Battle of Abukir, by Baron Gros, was lent to the Arts Council of Great Britain for the late summer and early fall. The Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, Canada, assembled an exhibition A Century of Canadian Collecting, to which Detroit lent its Sir Brooke Boothby by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

In the United States, The North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, assembled a large exhibition during April and May as a memorial to Dr. William Valentiner. Of the some 200 works of art in it, almost half were items which Dr. Valentiner had purchased for museums where he served as Director. To this show, the Detroit Institute

View of a portion of the outstanding exhibition of contemporary sculpture from the collection of Joseph H. Hirshhorn. More room for the display of sculpture was made possible by re-designing the Rivera Court of Arts lent over twenty-five objects from the permanent collection. Among these were a number acquired for Detroit by its former Director, including The Resurrected Christ by Botticelli, the Virgin and Child in a Landscape by Previtale, Monet's Gladioli and Matisse's The Window.

Another major exhibition to which Detroit contributed was that devoted to Winslow Homer, shown at the Metropolitan from late March to early May, after which it moved to the National Gallery, Washington. Homer's early Dinner Horn, Defiance: Inviting a Shot Before Petersburg and Girl with Laurel went from here. The Institute's Log Jam by Marsden Hartley and Juke Box by Jacob Lawrence were lent to form part of the American exhibition organized for the United States Information Agency. The Detroit Ben Shahn Clarinets and Tin Horn was lent for the Whitney exhibition The Museum and Its Friends; and three paintings by John Mix Stanley were sent to the Denver Art Museum to form part of The Western Heritage. Islamic textiles, bronzes and ceramics were lent to the Los Angeles County Museum and to the Museum of Art of the University of Michigan, both of which held exhibitions of Islamic Art during April and May. Almost a dozen French and Italian paintings and decorative arts were lent to the Baltimore Museum of Art for its exhibition The Age of Elegance: The Rococo and its Effect from April 25 to June 14.

Among other institutions and organizations to which The Detroit Institute of Arts lent material were Albion College, the American Federation of Arts, the Arts Club of Chicago, the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, Des Moines Art Center, Knoedler and Company and Oberlin College (for their exhibition of drawings), The Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York City and The Museum of Fine Arts in Houston, Texas.

A. REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT AND EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE DETROIT MUSEUM OF ART
FOUNDERS SOCIETY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is indeed a pleasure to tell you of our total gifts for 1959 since they mark an all-time high in the history of the Founders Society, in addition to being almost three times as great as our highest previous year, 1955, when we reported $1,102,440.25 in gifts. The gratifying total for 1959 was $2,956,627.55, of which $692,395.25 represents the value of works of art and the remaining $2,264,232.30 gifts of a non-accessionable nature. The principal reason for the high level of our donations in 1959 was the gift of the Springwells Property from the Ford Foundation which is valued at $1,920,000. The income from this real estate will make it possible henceforth to devote most of our membership income to purchasing works of art and carrying on any special activities which the Trustees may designate, whereas in the past, a goodly portion of the membership income had to underwrite the operation of the Society.

There was no concentrated membership drive in 1959, but solicitation continued at an intensive level throughout the year. During 1959, 400 new members were added compared to 539 in 1958. These new members gave us $3,295 in initial dues, making the total membership income $35,390, compared to $34,451.40 in 1958. We had to drop 292 members for a variety of reasons, which gave us a net increase of 108. During the year, renewals were received from 2,839 members, in addition to which we serviced 203 Life, Complimentary and Donor memberships, and carried 351 members in various stages of dues delinquency for a total of 3,793 members serviced.

Again in 1959 the Activities Committee, ably assisted by the Society's Membership Secretary, Mrs. David Dixon, was the most successful in membership solicitation, bringing in 163 memberships through their Print Rental service. Forty-nine new members were brought in by the Friends of Modern Art through their "Bal Moderne" and thirteen members joined as a result of our television program. The Art Adventurers brought in eight members, the Music Committee was responsible for four and 163 persons joined without any special solicitation.

The Music Committee, with Mrs. Michael W. Freeman as its able chairman, sponsored five distinguished concerts. The Women's Committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Daniel W. Goodenough, served as hostesses for five exhibitions as well as formal dinners preceding the openings of both the Hirshhorn exhibition in May and the American Biennial Show in November.

At the annual meeting of the Founders Society on February 9, 1959, changes were authorized in the by-laws increasing the maximum size of the board to 27 members, eliminating the classification of Emeritus Trustee and making provision for Associate Trustees and Honorary Trustees. At this annual meeting the following Trustees were elected for terms as follows: Leslie H. Green, Lawrence P. Fisher, Alvan Macauley, Jr., Lawrence A. Fleischman and John S. Newberry for the term ending at the Annual Meeting of 1962. The following new Trustees also were elected: Mrs. Harry L. Winston and Walker L. Cisler for term ending 1962; William M. Day for term ending 1961 and John N. Lord for term ending 1960.

New trustees appointed during the year were Roy D. Chapin, Jr., for term ending 1961, and Ralph T. McElvenny for term ending 1962.

Mrs. Daniel W. Goodenough, Mrs. Walter J. Guler, Mrs. Michael W. Freeman and Mrs. Isadore Levin, chairmen of the Women's, Activities, Music and the Friends of Modern Art committees, respectively, were elected as Associate Trustees for the duration of their terms of office as chairmen of their respective committees.

The following Honorary Trustees were elected: Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., Mrs. Horace E. Dodge, James S. Holden, Dr. George Kamperman, George Pierrot, and Mrs. A. D. Wilkinson.

At the Trustees Meeting immediately following the Annual Meeting the following officers were elected: Alvan Macauley, Jr., President; Mrs. Henry Ford II, Edward E. Rothman and Douglas F. Roby, Vice-Presidents; James S. Whitcomb, Treasurer; William A. Bostick, Executive Secretary.

Mr. Macauley made the following standing committee appointments:
Finance: James S. Whitcomb, Chairman; Messrs. Roby and Macauley
Endowment Promotion: Alan W. Joslyn, Chairman
Membership: Douglas F. Roby, Chairman
Women's: Mrs. Gaylord W. Gillis, Jr., Chairman

Henry T. Heald, President of the Ford Foundation, presents the Springwells Park property in Dearborn, as a gift to the Director of the Detroit Institute of Arts, and the President of its Founders Society

Metropolitan Opera Benefit: Mrs. Henry Ford II, Chairman

Nominating: Alan W. Joslyn, Chairman; Robert H. Tannahill, Mrs. Allan Shelden

The death of Dexter M. Ferry, Jr. on December 6, 1959, saddened everyone aware of his half century of devotion to the Detroit Institute of Arts and its parent organization, The Detroit Museum of Art. Mr. Ferry was president of the museum from 1913 to 1917 and of the Founders Society from 1920 until 1948, following in the footsteps of his father who was one of the original incorporators of the Museum in 1885. Dexter M. Ferry, Jr.'s initiative and support gave Detroit one of the great collections of American painting and without him the museum would not be what it is today.

During 1959 Founders Society publications income grossed $26,979.52, with a net profit of $4,255.17.

The Endowment Fund was decreased $66,131.18 due to the fact that $77,642.16 was withdrawn from the principal of the Eleanor Clay Ford Exhibition Fund to meet expenses of the Italian Renaissance, the Mayan Exhibition and the forthcoming Flemish Exhibition. In 1959 there were gifts of $11,510.98 to the Endowment Fund, outstanding among which were $5,531.25 from Mrs. Standish Backus for the Joseph Boyer Memorial Fund; $3,979.73 from Mrs. Alvan Macauley, Sr., to be added to the Macauley Fund; $1,000 from Mrs. Lillian Henkel Haass to be added to her fund, and $1,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Rothman for the General Endowment Fund. Other outstanding gifts for a variety of purposes were:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford II.....	$255,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Jr.	55,103.45
Mrs. Edsel Ford	50,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kanzler	19,212.00
Mr. and Mrs. Walter Buhl Ford II	11,000.00
Ford Motor Company Fund.....	10,000.00
The Detroit News	7,500.00
Mr. and Mrs. Douglas F. Roby	7,000.00
Mr. and Mrs. James S. Whitcomb	5,000.00

A total of $691,780.40 in cash income was received in 1959 which compared with 1957 and 1958 as follows:

	1957	1958	1959
Income from invested funds	$ 47,577.04	$ 46,523.09	$ 48,368.98
Membership dues, contributions, etc.	415,605.23	412,944.08	643,411.42
	$463,182.27	$459,467.17	$691,780.40

Of the $660,111.86 disbursed, $341,954.01 was spent for the purchase of works of art.

One important fund-raising activity during the year was the Founders Society cooperation in the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera in Detroit which netted $37,663.39 for the Society. This amount was applied toward the partial payment on the Flemish 15th Century triptych by The Master of St. Ursula. Mrs. Henry Ford II was general chairman of the Metropolitan's first season in Detroit in fifty years and much of the credit for the success of the benefit goes to her.

Another very successful benefit was "le Bal Moderne" presented by the Friends of Modern Art Committee under the able leadership of Mrs. Isadore Levin on December 5, at the museum. This ball which many people described as the most elegant they had ever attended, netted $18,884 for the Friends of Modern Art purchase funds.

During 1959 the following donors qualified as Benefactors: Walter B. Ford II, Mrs. Walter B. Ford II, J. L. Hudson Company, Michigan Consolidated Gas Company, and the National Bank of Detroit. The following were enrolled as Fellows: Detroit Edison Company, Mrs. Laura B. Higbie, Edward E. Rothman. The following qualified as members of the Corporation: C. Hascall Bliss, Henry Monroe Campbell, Roy D. Chapin, Jr., Simon D. Den Uyl, Miss Virginia DeVoy, Alexander Duffield, Mrs. Wallace Herdlein, Miss Virginia Hodges, Dr. J. Stewart Hudson, Mrs. Susan Duffield Kjellberg, Sydney Levison, Dr. James E. Lofstrom, Mrs. James E. Lofstrom, John F. Lord, F. Sibley Moore, Mrs. Oliver Pendar, Edgar P. Richardson, Francis E. Ross, Mrs. Lester Ruwe, Mrs. Alger Shelden and Mrs. Lyman White.

Solicitation of commercial firms by Mrs. Livingstone Howard was successful in enlisting the following Corporate Contributors: American Motors Corporation, Swedish Crucible Steel Company, Wilson Automation, and the following Corporate Members: City Bank, Earl-Beth Foundation, Evans Products, Manufacturers National Bank, National Coal and Oil, Stroh Brewery, J. Walter Thompson Co.

To report such an outstanding year with its record-breaking total of gifts is indeed gratifying. We have detailed plans for carrying forward promotion on every level in order to increase both the number of our annual members as well as donations from corporate members. William M. Day has accepted the chairmanship of our Membership Committee and we are hopeful of excellent results in this area. The private gifts and new memberships we receive every year are a constant demonstration of the excellence of our public relations, and emphasize the fact that donors both large and small approve of the outstanding work we are doing in the cultural life of the greater Detroit community.

Respectfully yours,

ALVAN MACAULEY, JR., President

WILLIAM A. BOSTICK, Executive Secretary

C. DIRECTOR'S REPORT

I wish to mention first the loss of one of our Trustees in 1959. By the death of Mr. Dexter M. Ferry, Jr., we lost one of the great constructive figures in the history of the museum, one who was connected with our institution from its beginning. His life emphasized the fact that our institution is one of the links that binds the old Detroit of the nineteenth century to the new Detroit of the twentieth century and, we hope, represents the best of both.

The function of an art museum is to collect, to preserve, to exhibit, and to interpret this great branch of human activities. The first three of these have to do with objects, the fourth with people. The Founders Society is the agency which has to do with the development of our collections and gifts to the museum and, to an increasing extent, our interpretation of them to the people.

Looking back upon the decade of the '50's we may fairly say that the Founders Society has performed the function of collecting with immense success. We acquired during the decade somewhat over 4,000 works of art and received a total of gifts in works of art or money of approximately $8,000,000. In the year 1959 we acquired 454 works of art having a total value of nearly $700,000. As I reviewed these acquisitions of 1959 it gave me satisfaction to see that we were able to enrich practically every aspect of our collections. The acquisitions ranged from the art of ancient Egypt to that of our own day. They were particularly remarkable in the fields of Medieval, Renaissance and eighteenth century art in Europe. The gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford II, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kanzler, John S. Newberry, the Metropolitan Opera Fund, and many others, were most important in this field.

It was also a year of remarkable accessions to our American collections. Although the purchase of the Pitts family collection was negotiated in 1958, the collection really became part of the museum and was placed on exhibition in 1959. This great purchase, together with other gifts from Robert H. Tannahill, John S. Newberry, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Fleischman and others, not only made it a remarkable year but made us feel that our collection of American art is now one of the great representative collections in the country.

In our activities of interpreting our collections to our own community we had, thanks to the assistance of many people and very active committees, a year marked by many things which we can look back upon with satisfaction. The Founders Society maintained an extension service in sixteen suburban communities and centers. It activated its membership department. It installed a new kitchen in the museum to facilitate our social activities. The Puppet Theatre, maintained by grants from The Detroit News, had a most interesting and successful year. With the help of the Activities Committee we installed a system of electronic guided tours of the museum which greatly improved the information available to our visitors. The Founders Society put on an experimental television program. The Metropolitan Opera Benefit was an extraordinary success, as was the ball put on by the Friends of Modern Art. Our Music Series had a very good year, as did the Lecture Series. The work of these committees, along with that of the Activities and the Women's Committee, will be described in more detail in section D immediately following this report. This was obviously a busy and successful year.

Once a year we like to report to you on certain special activities. The Art Quarterly, our magazine of scholarship and connoisseurship of art, now goes to thirty-five countries outside the United States: to twenty-one European countries, to Africa, the two Americas, the Near and Far East. As I look back over the list of eighty-two contributors whose writings have been published in the last five years, I find they represent most of the great museums and universities in America but also contain the names of English, French, Belgian, German, Swiss, Italian, Swedish and Austrian scholars. The value of this contribution to the scholarship of art, as coming from our institution, speaks for itself.

I wish to report also on the Archives of American Art which, although a separate and national foundation, is the child of the Founders Society. The Archives of American Art has grown in its five and a half years of existence into a national institution with a collection of over a million documents, many of remarkable interest and importance to research. This collection consists of original papers, microfilm, photographic records of artists and of their studios as well as of their work, tape-recorded interviews with significant figures in the arts. We have at present somewhat over 500 annual contributing members and our aim is to have 2,000 at least over the entire country. In 1959 the Archives spent for operation $45,000 of which $25,000 supported the headquarters here in our building and $15,000 went to our field work in New York, and the balance of $6,500 was spent upon microfilm, tape recordings, purchase of manuscripts and of equipment. The Archives has now a staff of four in Detroit and one in New York.

The purpose of the Archives is research. It is utterly impossible to measure the value of our holdings in cash terms. But it will interest you to know that at our very conservative inventory figures, the value of the material donated is $84,000; the money donated to date is $145,000. Some works of art have also been given to us. Since the Archives is a research institute, not a museum, these have been donated to the Detroit Institute of Arts, to a value to date of $15,000.

Let me close by reminding you again that all our progress as an institution rests upon the good will of our friends and supporters. We have very little money at our disposal but depend upon gifts for current operations. If I am able to report a year to be proud of, I want at the same time to thank all of you for your help, your friendship, and your interest in making this museum, if not the largest in America, I hope the most beautiful, the most human and the most interesting for the people of our community.

E. P. RICHARDSON, Director

D. WORK OF VARIOUS COMMITTEES

During the last year, several committees in particular contributed greatly in promoting various activities and projects sponsored by the Detroit Institute of Arts. The Women's Committee consisting of forty-nine women, worked under the chairmanship of Mrs. Gaylord W. Gillis, Jr. and Mrs. Daniel Goodenough, who succeeded her in the autumn. During 1959, this group of women sponsored and handled the many details in connection with five major exhibition openings. These were large undertakings, which were expertly organized, and which added greatly to the success of the exhibitions, as did two formal dinner parties, preceding openings.

Members of the Activities Committee have continued to sponsor their picture rental project by volunteering their time to operate and maintain this active program. The print collection has grown to 710 reproductions with some 500 Founders Society members availing themselves of this privilege. The committee also sponsored four morning Coffee Hours throughout the year to promote special exhibitions. These each attracted between four and five hundred persons, who were glad to combine a chat with friends over coffee with a preview of the show. The Committee, consisting of thirty-six members under Mrs. Walter J. Guler as Chairman, instigated the idea of bringing LecTour to the Museum, and made a major donation for its installation.

The Music Committee, headed by Mrs. Michael Freeman, offered an outstanding series of unusual events on the Detroit Institute of Arts concert series. The programs included the American Artists Trio, brilliant young Detroit artists; an evening of folk music by Marais and Miranda, international baladeers; The Budapest String Quartet and Irmgard Seefried, leading soprano of the Vienna State Opera. The excellent program presented by the Lecture Committee is included in the report of the Education Department.

The Friends of Modern Art successfully completed its most active year since its founding in 1931. Under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Isadore Levin, the following Executive Committee guided the Friends in carrying out its program: Mrs. Allan Shelden III, Vice-Chairman, Mrs. Frederick M. Alger, Jr., Mrs. Henry Ford II, Mrs. Robert Wardrop, Dean Coffin, W. Hawkins Ferry, Kaye Goodwin Frank, Dr. James E. Lofstrom and Robert H. Tannahill.

In January, 1959, a committee of selection from the Friends purchased three important works as gifts to the museum's permanent collection. These were a bronze by Jacques Lipschitz, Seated Bather, a painting by Renato Birolli, Canto Popolare Fiammingo No. 1, and a collage by Conrad Marca-Relli, The Dweller. The funds for these purchases were provided from the proceeds of a benefit performance by Victor Borge in December, 1958, arranged under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frederick M. Alger, Jr. This benefit performance netted the Friends of Modern Art $8,156.36.

Following the success of the Victor Borge benefit, the Friends sponsored Le Bal Moderne on December 5, 1959, which included dinner, dancing and entertainment, in the Great Hall and Rivera Court of the museum. The formal ball, the first to have been given in the museum, was attended by 330 guests. From it the Friends realized $18,060.42 for their purchase funds.

At the time of Le Bal Moderne, the Institute of Arts was presenting its Second Biennial of American Painting and Sculpture, organized in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. The Friends of Modern Art elected to purchase from this exhibition the sculpture, Earth Loom, by Seymour Lipton.

The distinguished success of such an ambitious program and the addition of four major works to the permanent collection is ample evidence of the increased importance and vitality of the Friends of Modern Art in the activities of the museum. The dedicated work of all those associated with the group has been an inspiration to the staff and to the Curator of Contemporary Art, as well as a great material help.

E. EXTENSION SERVICES

This is an account of Extension Services activities in sixteen suburban centers of metropolitan Detroit during the year 1959. Initial funds for the Department of Extension Services during 1959, as in 1957 and 1958, were contributed to the Detroit Museum of Art Founders Society by the following business firms interested in serving metropolitan Detroit: the J. L. Hudson Company, The National Bank of Detroit, the Michigan Consolidated Gas Company and the Detroit Edison Company.

Programs. Extension Services worked in cooperation with school boards, library commissions, recreation departments and other recognized community organizations to provide Museum education activities in suburban communities. Space, certain equipment and other facilities were provided by the community; Extension Services provided qualified lecturers, instructors and materials. The curriculum was adapted to the needs of the particular area, and a moderate fee was charged to cover materials and instruction.

Centers. The sixteen Extension Services centers in metropolitan Detroit include Birmingham, Cherry Hill (a school district in Dearborn and Nankin Townships), Dearborn, Farmington, Ferndale, Grosse Pointe, Hamtramck, Livonia, Melvindale, Plymouth, Redford Township (two centers), Royal Oak, St. Clair Shores, Southgate and Warren. The total enrollment for 1959 in these centers was over 3,000, with participants coming from twenty-five suburban communities. Twenty-nine part-time instructors on the Extension Services staff assisted in teaching the workshops and lecture courses offered.

Curriculum. The curriculum offered during 1959 in these centers included preschool workshops for children three to five years of age and their mothers, workshops for elementary and secondary school children and adult lecture series. Three complete workshop series for all school age participants were offered in a center's yearly program, thereby providing workshop activities for fifteen to twenty weeks a year for each age group.

Lecture series for adults on the History of Art were offered in Birmingham, Ferndale, Grosse Pointe, Plymouth, Royal Oak and St. Clair Shores. In Ferndale, Plymouth and Royal Oak, Extension Services worked in cooperation with the local school districts and Michigan State University's Continuing Education Program, a Ford Foundation project.

Exhibitions. In October and November the ground floor galleries of The Detroit Institute of Arts were devoted to an exhibition of work by participants in Extension Services workshop programs. An opening reception for these participants, their families and friends was held on Saturday, October 3rd, which was attended by over 800 people.

During the year two special exhibitions of objects from the Museum's program of collections were arranged in cooperation with the Ford Foundation's program of Curriculum Study in the Humanities at the Edsel Ford High School, Dearborn. These were Five Centuries of Graphic Arts and A Survey of Sculpture in Stone, Metal and Wood.

Special Services. One of the original aims of the Extension Services department, aside from establishing suburban centers for workshop and lecture programs, was to serve as an art program resource center for communities of metropolitan Detroit. During the past year a series of lecture programs called Your Child and the Arts was planned for Oak Park, and in Livonia and Hamtrack special auditorium programs titled What Is An Art Museum? were presented.

The curator worked closely with groups in metropolitan Detroit such as Cooperative Nursery and Parent-Teacher Associations to demonstrate the value of art experiences for children and to make them aware of the importance of Extension Services activities in their own communities. The programs offered by the Extension Services department have aroused interest among museum officials in a number of cities experiencing the same suburban growth as Detroit. Inquiries point out the growing need for similar museum services in many metropolitan areas of the United States. The Detroit Institute of Arts Extension Services department may well serve as a pilot program for other American museums to follow.

The varied activities for young people and adults offered by the Extension Services department are unique in museum education. Through these activities The Detroit Institute of Arts makes available to people in suburban communities the opportunity to become aware of works of art and the values to be gained from first-hand experience with them, as well as the opportunity to work with the varied materials of the artist.

Mrs. Frederick M. Alger, Jr., Al Capp, Henry F. duPont, Senator J. W. Fulbright, Joseph H. Hirshhorn, Howard W. Lipman, Charles F. Moore, Jr., John Walden Meyer, Mrs. Aline B. Saarinen, Mrs. Otto L. Spaeth, Mrs. Charles F. Willis, Jr.

Archivist's Report

Consistent with the rapid growth of the Archives is the addition of three members to the National Board of Trustees, John Walden Meyer, former Director of the Museum of the City of New York, Mrs. Aline B. Saarinen, well-known author and critic and Mrs. Otto L. Spaeth who has been active for the past year on the New York Committee of the Archives.

In October the Archives received a foundation grant of $250,000 from the Ford Foundation specifically for a broad national survey, bringing in historians, sociologists, cultural anthropologists, librarians, archivists, as well as museum experts, artists and critics. It is hoped through this survey to enlist the interest and support of the various learned professions in the field of American studies.

In the spring, the Archives was requested by the United States Information Agency to handle the finances and to edit the catalog of the Art Section of the American National Exhibition that took place in Sokolniki Park in Moscow. The first American exhibit in Russia since the Revolution forty years ago, it consisted of examples of painting and sculpture, created since 1917, and lent by private individuals and museums.

During the May meetings of the Ontario Library Association in Windsor, a session was planned to introduce interested members to the work of the Archives of American Art. The group which met in the Archives headquarters was particularly concerned with the technical cataloging procedures of our organization. Later in the year, some forty members of the English Department of Wayne State University met here to inspect our holdings and familiarize themselves generally with our work. Mrs. Lesley also took part in a workshop discussion of library methods held by the Special Libraries Association at the Detroit Public Library. Judging from the interested comments and queries, her article on the Archives in the Library Journal, September 15, reached a large audience.

Among other activities in Detroit, "An Evening with Vincent Price," was the best attended. At a benefit performance, arranged by the Fifth Anniversary Committee of the Archives of American Art, Mr. Price read from the letters of Vincent Van Gogh and a play by Tennessee Williams.

Since gifts to the Archives during 1959 were particularly noteworthy for their number and interest, there is not space enough to list more than a very few outstanding donations. These include four volumes of Rubens Peale's Diary from October 22, 1855 to July 25, 1865, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Fleischman; twenty-seven James Abbott McNeil Whistler letters given by Charles E. Feinberg in honor of Vincent Price; sketches, sketchbooks, an account book, passport, and the autograph copy of Worthington Whittredge's autobiography donated by his grandsons, L. Emery Katzenbach, II, W. E. Katzenbach and W. Whittredge Katzenbach; and from Elizabeth McCausland came her correspondence, working papers and other documents covering a period of almost thirty years. Other donors of substantial amounts of material include Miss Isabel Bishop, Theodore Bolton, Valentine Dudensing, Albert Duveen, Mrs. Elizabeth Dewing Kaup, Mrs. William Langdon Kihn, Howard Lipman, Robert G. McIntyre, Mrs. Frank H. Myers, Roy R. Neuberger, John S. Newberry, Miss Anna Wells Rutledge, Charles Sheeler, Abraham Walkowitz and Rudolph Wunderlich.

The activities of the New York office of the Archives under the direction of Miss Bartlett Cowdrey included microfilming records of the following artists and institutions: American Abstract Artists, Art Students League (1875-1900), Isabel Bishop, Asher B. Durand, Emily Genauer, Louis Guglielmi, Winslow Homer, Bernard Karfiol, Paul Manship, Georgia O'Keeffe, Mrs. William Page, Rehn Gallery, Charles Sheeler, Abraham Walkowitz, Max Weber, William Zorach, and the Whitney Museum of Art files on Eilshemius, Karfiol and Sheeler.

Conversations with the following were recorded: Isabel Bishop, Charles Burchfield, Edward Fowles, Edward Hopper, Sheldon Keck and William Zorach, each interviewed by John D. Morse; Isabel Bishop and Warren Chappell interviewed by Henrietta Moore; Philip Evergood interviewed by John I. H. Bauer; Mrs. Edith Gregor Halpert discussing the American National Exhibition in Moscow, July, 1959; Marsden Hartley discussed by Elizabeth McCausland and Hudson Walker; International Association of Art Critics; Elizabeth McCausland interviewed by Frank Kleinholtz; and Minoru Yamasaki's tape recording for his exhibition at the Detroit Institute of Arts.
